Probate.

He alleges that the instrument offered is not his father's last will; that it was not signed in the presence of each or either of the subscribing witnesses; that the witnesses did not sign at the request of the decedent; and that the Instrument was obtained and the execution procured. If it was ever executed, by fraud and undue influence practised upon the decedent by his daughters, Julia D. Harris and Clarissa Goodnow, or one of them, or by some other person whose identity is unknown to the contestant. For these reasons, it is alleged, the will is void.

Surrogate Abbott set the matter down for hearing on Jan. 22.

Mr. Strong was very well known in the Eastern District. He was a large contributor to charitable enterprises. He was seventy-three years old at his death, and, his sons declare, very feeble. Three years ago he had a stroke of paralysis, which, it is said, affected his brain and left him in a weak mental condition.

On the day he drew the will which is now being contested he called at his office, in Williamsburg, and drew up the paper. He was so feeble, it is said, that it was necessary for one of his sons to assist him upstairs.

On the folowing day he went to Atlantic City. He died on Nov. 9. His attending physicians said death was due to cancer, but the sens dispute the assertion.

When the woman arrived in this country she was met at Castle Garden by Sabio, who instead of takin her to her husband induced her to live with him at 31 North Seventh street, Williamsburg.
Caruso went to the Lee Avenue Court and succeeded in getting a summons for the proprietor of the house where his wife and Sabio were living. He charged that the woman was being kept there against her will, but could not prove it, and glso failed to get his wife. Ever since then, it is said, Caruso has fairly haunted the house where the couple live, and finally, his wife becoming tired of it, had him arrested on a charge of abandonment.

"I am willing to support her," said Caruso in court this morning, "but she must leav ethat other man and live with me."

Mrs. Caruso remarked that she would not do such a thing, but wanted her husband to be sent to jall for life.

Justice Goetting dismission the case. Mrs. Caruso cried, but she left the court with Sabino after having haughtily repulsed her husband.

between City Works Commissioner White and the Mayor were at one time very strained, so much so that the Commissioner threatened to resign.

Politicians generally believe the story to be true, and the friends of Buchanan, who say their leader has been hetrayed, are going about with chips on their groulders. Both the Ma r and Mr. White, however, deny that there is any truth in it.

It is related that shortly after election the Mayor sent for Buchanan, and in recognition of his work in the last campaign offered him his choice of any subordinate office. The Twenty-second Ward leader chose the office mentioned, then went back to his district to select assistants.

When Commissioner White heard of this, according to the story, he refused to appoint Buchanan, claiming that he had promised the position to a friend of Mr. Groat, recently Judge Gavnor's law partner. The Mayor insisted on Buchanan Mr. White said he would resign first, and then Mr. Schieren changed around. It is also reported that a lively meeting was held in Corporation Counsel McDonald's office, where the Mayor and Mr. Buchanan met to talk over matters.

Mayor Schieren, when seen, denied that Buchanan had been promised any office whatever. He also said he had never interfered with Mr. White's appointments.
